

Purpose

To teach students that the arts are more than a collection of images, designs or artifacts, but are a practical means to better inform ourselves and discover things we intrinsically know but have forgotten; to bring to consciousness what people already know. To heighten students' awareness and perception of life by making them vicariously live it. The arts are one of the chief means by which we grapple with and interpret reality.

My goal is to create and foster a collaborative learning experience bringing together creative practices, problem-solving across disciplines, community-engaged scholarship, and real-world inquiry models.
